The steamboats will be built on a new pattern. They will be much smaller than the beats now in use. The wheels will be propelled by both steam and observicity. One engine and three motors will be attached to each wheel. At present the wheels of a steamboat make eighteen revolutions a minute, but the improved power will cause a minimum of forty-five revolutions. The speed will be increased to twenty-five or thirty mites an honr, while ten miles is now considered very good.

There will be boats exclusively for freight, which will make slower trips than the passenger boats. The passenger steamers will make no long stops at wharves and landings. They will a: rive and leave on schedule time, only stopping long enough to take on and put off passengers.

One believes in digging them early, another late. One sprinkles them with lime; another desprinkles them with lime; another declares that he "never uses any disinfectants," as though the hare suggestion eras repulsive to him. And so it goes. One has one method, and his neighbor has another. But, as The Orange County Farmer remarks, all agree that the potatoss must be kept in a coel, dry place, a well ventilated cellar being considered heat. The general opinion also favors the use of air slauked lime as a light grinkling over the tukens when storing

FARM-FIELD

CARE OF CORNSTALKS

There is necessarily much difficulty in saving coarse stalks of corn full of sap so as to make good feed in winter by ordinary methods. It is this fact which has had much to do with making ensilage popular. For the benefit of those who have no silos, but are in the habit of leaving the corustalks in the field until dried out by freezing weather, The American Cultivator gives this advice:

The common objection to drawing stalks in early is that they will heat in mew or stack. If piled in large heaps soon after being ent the mass will rot The Coney island Athiests esub has mode of the first of the Mail-Fitzsimmeas manner. But some fermentation is not Sight to $36,000.

Some of these stalks were mildewed, and we feared that they might, if fed to down bearing young, canse abortion, but we later abandoned that theory me a mistake.

There is, we believe, less danger from excessive and injurious heating of fresh stalks, and even when it results in some loss of nutrition it makes what remains more palatable, and probably also more easy to be digested. We have often seen eatile in winter greedily picking ont the stalks that had become overheated in the most from the heating. Some of these stalks were mildewed, and we feared that they might, if fed to down bearing young, canse abortion, but we later abandoned that theory me and when fell were still moist from the heating. Gold men will be in the majority in the finternational monetary conference which will meet in Berlia, Nev. 22. The attitude of the British delegates is expected to atmospheric changes several months. The green stalks will beat if juiled up, and in hot weather will soon rot down. But we believe it possible to get them in barns or stacks dried as much as they can be without exposure to rain and freezing, finan there is from wet atalks thut have been exposed to atmospheric changes several months. The green stalks will be to green the property of the property o them keep the whole in better condition than is possible any other way. If the bundles of stalks are made smell a layer of straw between each layer of bundles will absorb all the moisture that the stalks five off in fermenting. The straw facilf thus subjected to heating will become more palatable, and will be eaten fu the heating of cornstalks that have not been exposed to rains or freezing there is much less likelihood of the more injuriens fungous growths that come from fermentation of cornstniks whose antrition has largely been washed out of them. The rich jnices of the ripened cornstalks act partfally as a preservative, and at any rate the richer feed that stock gets from these sweeter stalks maintains vigorous health and enables the animal to resist the fungous pohons that depend on physical exhuustion to make them effective.

Theoretically there is nothing letter than autumn cultivation, and this is often spoken of as a practice that may b followed in any season. The weather controls the extent to which it can be carried ont, and though when well exe cuted; there is hothing of greater value, dry rafely run together, however much wet falls on them during winter; conse quently they turn out dry and easily worked in spring, whereas, if plowed out in winter, the condition in spring is more suggestive of a bar of old fushtoned soap than of material from which prellow seed beds are made. The lighter soils can of course be worked advantageously in less favorable weather, so a longer season remains for working them consequently an apparent backwardness may often be made good. But whatever the evil there is uo doubt that, whore possible, it is an advantage to go forward with the tilling in autumn.

STORING COMB HONEY.

ter Then When Taken from the lilve. In answer to the question how and where to store comb honey during winter G. M. Doolittle gives the following advice and personal experience in Gleanings in Bee Culture: Comb honey should always be stored in a warm, dry place during the fall and spring months at least, when a great change of temperature is likely to take place, but during the winter it may be kept in a dry basement room or cellar where no frost ever reaches, provided you are on the lookont to take it out when the temperature on the outside rises much above that in the basement. Otherwise the warm, moist outside air, coming in contact with the surface of the cold or cooler honey, will eause moisture to stand in drops on the comis, when the honey will rapidly deteriorate. If I were trying to keep honey of any amount which I wished to preserve in salable form, I would not let the temperature of the room ever go below 60 degs., while from 70 to 90 degs, would

I once kept some section honey for end of the three years than it was when hive. This honey was placed on a shelf about four feet from the floor of the sitting room, right back time the steve had a fire in it, while dnring the snimmer months, when no fire over the battlefield. was kept in the stove, the honey was carried to an upper chamber facing the south, where the san made the room very warm, in addition to the warmth ponring forth treasures, and angels of coming from the kitchen stovepipe, which ran through this chamber. In this way the honey never "saw" a temperature of less than 60 degs., while reses, children will play over it, and one from 80 to 100 degs. was the rule much of the time. When I cut this honey it was nearly "jack wax," and for quality it was not surpassed by any lever tasted.

I have often thought that it might pay to use this plan on a whole crop of honey during years when the production ex-ceeded the demand, thus causing low prices to prevail, while the very next year might be a poor one, so that thus keeping it might dendle in price. When combs of honey are to be given to the bees the cracking of the comh does no harm, for the bees will fix it up during the next season so it cannot be told where the eracks were.

Under the head of the screwworm fly an interesting case is given, in which the screwworm rendered valuable assistance in removing a morbid growth in a hoof crack of a mule brought to the lafirmary of the station for treatment. The worms removed the growth completely, and the veterinarian then re-moved the worms. Nothing is recommended for the ox warble except the application of tobacco juice and a 2 per cent. solution of carbolic acid to prevent the deposition of the eggs.

Grow More Roots. The advice is always being given to grow more roots, and their advantages, especially as cattle feed, are descanted writing to the New York World, thinks there are two sides to this question. She says: "Granting their value to feed, there is no crop more laborious to raise than roots. They must be often cultivated to keep down weeds, and when it comes to harvesting them it is the hardest kind of work; then to feed them properly they should be washed and afterward sliced." Taking all this into consideration it is no wonder that it is easier to advise others to raise roots than It would be for a person to raise them himself. The roots ought to be very valuable to pay for the trouble their pro-

State Averages of Yield Per Acre. According to Statistician Dodge, the range of yields of ten years for corn has been from 20 to 27 bushels per acre. The report for wheat gives the state averages of yield per acre, ranging from 614 to 22 hushels and averaging 18 bushels. The North Dakota, 12.2; Washington, 18.4; Oregon, 15.7; California, 12.8. The average yield of oats is 24.3 hush-

The American Bee Jonrnal indorses the foregoing and emphasizes "strong colonies, with plenty of healthful stores, as important essen-tials in safe wintering of bees."

for a catalogue giving particulars. It has been announced that the Chicago fat stock and borse show is indefinitely postponed. This means there will be no fat stock show in Chicago this year. The corn crop of 1892, according to the Cinclunati Price Current, is 1,610,000,000 pushels. The seveu great corn states are 1 per cent. short of last year. Special Corn Fertiliser. In order to test the correctness of the opinion expressed in bulletin No. 14, of the Hatch (Mass.) experiment station that the special corn fertilizers on the market contain too small a proportion of potash, an experiment was made upon the grounds of the station during the past season, which is reported in bulletin No. 18. The experiment seems to Indicate the correctness of the opinion heretofore given that the so called "special corn fertilizers" contain too much phosphorie acid and too little potash. In breaking up ordinary sod land for corn, if fertilizers only are to be need, Mr. Brooks, agriculturist of the station, recommends to apply those which are rich In potash. Use material which will supply 80 to 100 pounds of actual potash, from 25 to 30 pounds of phosphoric acid and from 15 to 20 pounds of nitrogen per acre. If "special corn fertilizer" is to Maine.
